Second period classes will dismiss at 10:15 a.m. and third period classes will begin at 11:30 a.m. to allow all students and faculty to attend.

About 80 scholarship recipients, Alpha Chi members, Who's Who Nominees, the President's Honor Roll and individual student's accomplishments will be recognized, Tom Turns, dean of student services, said.

New student organizations to be recognized are the Music

Ensemble Student's Society, U.T. Tyler Student Chapter of Association Computing for Machinery and Business Students Organization.

After the presentation of the president of each campus organization, each president will then recognize each sponsor.

The Tyler Rotary, Amaco

and Young Citizen (male and female) Awards will be presented.

The program will end with the presentation of the prestigious Watson W. Wise Incentive Award.

conduct, industriousness, sincerity, scholarship, character, citizenship and civic responsibility.

The winner of the award receives $500 and an engraved plaque.

Each school nominates two students and a selection committee makes the final decision.

Hall slated to address May grads

U.S. Congressman Ralph M. Hall will be the commencement speaker for The University of Texas spring graduation scheduled for 2 p.m. May 16 in Harvey Hall.

Hall is representative of Texas' 4th Congressional District.

Although he is serving in his first term as U.S. representative, Hall served for 12 years as Rockwall County Judge. Then he was District Nine State Senator for 10 years.

A graduate of SMU, Hall holds the honorary Doctor of Laws degree from East Texas State University.

Congressman Hall will be introduced by Dr. James H. Stewart Jr., president of U.T. Tyler.

The spring commencement is for all U.T. Tyler students who completed degree requirements in the fall semester or are completing these requirements in the spring semester.

There are 325 students scheduled for commencement participation. Twenty will receive fall graduate degrees and 102 will receive fall baccalaureate degrees. There are 39 spring graduate degree candidates and 164 spring baccalaureate degree candidates.

First campus wedding held on Easter morning

Dixie Davidson, U.T. Tyler journalism major, and Joe A. Waldrop II, U.T. Tyler music education major, were married April 19, marking the first wedding ever to be performed on the campus at U.T. Tyler.

This wedding occurred outside a northern, wooded hillside slope beside the lake.

"I've always wanted to marry on Easter morning, symbolizing my new life with my wife," Joe said.

"The most significant moment of the wedding occurred as we were placing the rings upon our hands. At that time, I noticed the sun breaking from behind a cloud and showing its brilliance for the first time that morning," Dixie said.

Following the wedding ceremony, the cake was cut, a toast was made, and the bride's bouquet was thrown at the reception on campus.

The bride, groom, and wedding party departed for breakfast, served in the Crock 'n Ladle banquet room at the Best Western Motel.

Vice president Sawyer announces retirement

John R. Sawyer, vice president for fiscal affairs for U.T. Tyler, has announced his retirement plans effective August 31.

Sawyer is the only vice president for fiscal affairs in the history of the University. He joined the staff in October 1972.

"During the last eight and one-half years, my work with you in the development and evolution of Tyler State College, Texas Eastern University and now the University of Texas at Tyler has been especially fulfilling," Sawyer said.

filling," Sawyer said.

Sawyer, a native of Kerens and a graduate of Athens High School, holds a B.B.A. degree in business administration from Baylor University. He was employed at Pan American University in Edinburg from 1950-72 before coming to Tyler.

In response to Sawyer's resignation, President Stewart said, "Words are inadequate to express the full value of his contributions to the operation of U.T. Tyler from its beginning.

Pirtle Scholarship given to psychology graduate

Charles Walker, Tyler psychology candidate, was one of eight people chosen from 300 applicants to work on a Ph.D. in clinical psychology at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas.

Walker is the second Pirtle Scholarship recipient at U.T. Tyler. The scholarship provides a $1,200 cash stipend for graduate students. Last year's winner, Rita Casey of Tyler, was also a psychology graduate student. She is now enrolled in the graduate psychology program at the U.T. Austin.

While at U.T. Tyler, Walker has maintained a 4.0 grade point average. He is a laboratory assistant, research assistant, a member of Alpha Chi and was an Alpha Chi distinguished student this year. He was also chosen the distinguished student for the department of education and psychology.

The program at the Health and Science Center includes clinical rotation where students get experience in a wide variety of clinical experiences in various hospitals and centers in the Dallas area.

"He (Walker) is one of our top graduate students," Dr. Robert Geffner, psychology faculty, said. "He is a research assistant for me in addition to serving as the laboratory technician. He gets along well with students and faculty and was also nominated for the Watson Wise Incentive Award this year."

Editorials

Saying goodbye...

With this issue we say goodbye to President James Stewart Jr. and John Sawyer, vice president for fiscal affairs.

Both men joined the administrative staff in 1972 and have served as the only president and vice president for fiscal affairs in the history of the university.

Between the two, they have 58 years of experience in Texas education.

The competence and dedication of these two men have been significant in the accomplishments achieved at U.T. Tyler during their years here.

With appreciation and thanks, we wish the best to both President Stewart and Mr. Sawyer.

May... an end a beginning

May. The end of another semester.

May is many things to many people. For seniors, it is both an end and a beginning. The end of years of studying. The beginning of a better paycheck (or so it is hoped).

May has long been a month for important events. Two special days in May were designated by Presidential proclamations: Mothers Day and Armed Forces Day. In most states, the last Monday of the month is observed as Memorial Day.

The most famous horse race in the country, the Kentucky Derby, takes place on the first Saturday in May at Churchill Downs in Kentucky.

But perhaps the most important event for those people of English descent was the founding of Jamestown, Va. as the first permanent English settlement in America on May 14, 1607.

Other May milestones in the progress and growth of the United States include: the beginning of the Constitutional Convention, May 25, 1787; the starting of Lewis and Clark up the Missouri River, May 14, 1804; the nomination of Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency, May 18, 1860; the opening of Brooklyn Bridge to traffic,

May 24, 1883; and the opening of Golden Gate Bridge, May 17, 1937.

On this day in history—May 4—Rhode Island declared its independence in 1776; Horace Mann, American educator, was born in 1796; Thomas Huxley, English biologist, was born in 1825; and the Haymarket Riot took place in Chicago in 1886.

Many people whose lives made some change in the world were born in May. Two who come to mind are Harry Truman and John F. Kennedy, the 33rd and 35th presidents. Bob Hope, a man who has perhaps had an impact on more people than either Truman or Kennedy, will be 78 on May 29.

If you were born in May and believe in horoscopes, then you most likely already noticed that the emphasis is on change and variety. Be aware of talents; take more initiative. Candid conversations with associates will improve communications.

Green is the color for May. Green trees, green leaves, greenbacks, green grass, and the emerald for a birthstone.

If you missed May Day, have never been to the Kentucky Derby, do not like green, are not a mother, and always have to work on Memorial Day, cheer up. School is almost out.

Fall honors program set

The Honors program for the fall semester will be a study of "The City: The Self and Urban Structure."

Dr. Allen Martin, sociology faculty, is to be the principal instructor. Contributing instructors will include two U.T. Tyler professors, one from literature and one from history, as well as a sociologist from another university.

The fall seminar will incorporate views from several disciplines including political science, history, sociology, psychology and philosophy. It will focus on the effects that city processes, structures, and institutions have on individuals' perceptions, relationships, and social actions.

Dr. Stephen Lefevre, political science faculty and a member of the Honors Committee, said, "I am excited about the program. We have new and exciting things planned."

"The program has had a good year. I think we are building in the right direction."

Admission to the honors program is achieved either through faculty nomination or student application. Each student must be approved by the Honors Committee. The committee members are Dr. Lefevre; Dr. Don Killebrew, biology faculty; and Dr. Chad Edwards, music faculty.

"I am real excited about student interest in the program, and the willingness of the faculty to take on added responsibility," Lefevre said.

Students applying to the program must be committed to advancing their knowledge of the physical and natural sciences, the humanities, the social sciences, and the arts. The students must be fulltime undergraduates with a 3.2 grade point average.

Honors 4300D will meet on Tuesday from 2:00 til 4:40 in the fall.

Shooting incident shows potential police hazards

(Editor's Note: The following story is a factual account of a shooting which occurred a short time ago. It is not designed to sensationalize the actions of the officer nor to entertain the reader with grisly details. It is written to give the reader an opportunity to visualize the anxieties of police officers as they confront the potential hazards of police work.)

By DAN THOMAS
Staff Writer

The patrol car cruised along slowly, occupied by one state trooper, half-relaxed and half-alert. The voice of a police radio squawked out a "wanted" bulletin, ruining the last part of his favorite song which pulsed from the good-time radio.

He glanced at his watch, then darted his eyes toward the rear-view mirror to observe a pickup make a "U" turn in the road behind him.

"Hey, that wanted bulletin was about a red and white Chevy pickup," he thought.

His left hand pulled the slack out of the seat belt as his right hand whirled the steering wheel in a counter-clockwise circle. The engine's rumble changed to a roar, and the black and white patrol car blitzed down the highway in pursuit.

At first the pickup seemed to be gaining speed, but then it pulled over on the shoulder and stopped.

The trooper grabbed his radio's microphone, blurted out his location and the suspect's license plate number, then shoved the gear selector into park as the patrol car rolled to a stop.

The driver remained inside the pickup. He sat erect in the seat, facing the rear view mirror in the cab.

The amplified voice of the trooper boomed out of the overhead speaker: "Step out of the truck and put your hands on top of your head."

The suspect failed to respond to several commands; so with cautious steps the officer approached the driver's side of the vehicle.

When the trooper reached the rear bumper of the pickup, suddenly the driver's door burst open and the suspect jumped out with a pistol in his hand.

A shot zipped past the officer and shattered the windshield of the patrol car.

The amazed and terrified trooper recoiled, and three rapid shots blazed from his revolver.

Another round exploded from the suspect's gun, causing a burning pain in the officer's wrist.

Quickly the trooper took cover behind the right front of the patrol car. Unfortunately, the suspect moved to the left front fender as bullets continued to rip from his weapon.

Thoughts began to click in the trooper's head as he crouched behind the wheel...

"How bad am I injured?...Did I hit him too?...How many shots did I fire?...Do I have time to reload?...God, please help me...I've gotta get away from this car."

Then he remembered the shotgun in the patrol car, and inched his way to the front door. His hand grasped the door handle and pushed up. The door was locked. His only key dangled in the ignition switch.

The officer's eyes moved up from the keys to the driver-side window where he saw the face of the suspect looking back at him. He ducked down quickly and looked under the car to see if the man was moving.

A shot ricocheted from under the car and plowed into the pavement. Having missed again, the suspect retreated to safety behind the rear wheel.

The "cat and mouse" situation had lasted long enough. The trooper decided to run for cover and had taken about five long strides from the car when he realized, "There is no cover to run to."

The roadside changed to pasture and the only sign of cover was a barb-wire fence.

He turned quickly to run back to the patrol car, but the suspect was coming from behind the front fender. The officer stopped and fired his last three shots.

The suspect fell back behind the car.

Now the trooper huddled beside the right front wheel and prayed that he could finish reloading before the maniac came around the car after him.

His hands shook as he tried to stuff cartridges into the cylinder holes. The bullets seemed too big and the holes too small.

At last there were no more empty holes left and the cylinder clicked back into firing position.

The trooper's right hand had turned numb from the wound to his wrist. He felt blood on his thigh and realized that he had been hit with a slug above his knee.

The officer waited, listening for footsteps. The only sound was the crackling voice of a police dispatcher calling another unit.

He stood up with pistol raised, and walked to the left side of the car.

The suspect lay on his back in the highway, eyes open to the sun. The backside of his head was gone.

Exhausted, the trooper sat down in the seat of the patrol car. After a few moments of silence, he called for an ambulance, a supervisor, and a photographer.

Having made the proper notifications, he reached over and unlocked the passenger side door, swearing never to lock it again. Then he stepped out of the car, walked to the barb-wire fence, leaned against a corner post, and threw up.

Several less fortunate peace officers have since died in similar shooting sprees while protecting the freedoms of law abiding citizens and visitors.

Every hour each day, some police officer lays his life on the line so that another human can enjoy the liberties guaranteed by law.

To the officer, those risks go with the badge. He cannot run and hide because he represents the people, and no criminal or group of criminals can overpower that unified strength.

The officer stands his ground and fights, knowing all the while that he may be required to give that last full measure of devotion...his life.

Fast-paced Americans apathetic

BY BILLIE PYE

Staff Writer

Because Flint junior Sherre Regis lived the first 19 years of her life in Aruba and Libya, her values are different from most Americans, and she is having to make many adjustments.

"People here have such a fast pace of life and are just so darn busy," Regis said. "And the vast majority of people I have met here just don't care about other people."

"In Libya, everyone knew everyone else, and they helped each other; they are so polite and mannerly."

"I also find this country has more of a caste system. Here it is by your color and your family status, and people will not associate with people out of their class, like they would over there."

Regis finds prejudice a dominating factor in the states, especially in East Texas.

"It comes from the blacks just as well as the whites," she said. "I prefer to keep out of things and to stay by myself and not get involved in a situation as bitter as that."

Regis thinks Americans don't realize how good things are in this country. She explained:

"Everyone here has had so much and they don't think they have anything. They're always griping about something."

"I remember seeing people who had been in the war and didn't have arms or legs, and to a greater degree than we see here."

After the revolution, tanks chased children down the streets and the drivers laughed at them.

"We little kids were scared to death, and we would hide behind a lamp post, although it didn't do any good," she said. "But they would come as close to us as they could."

No one ever really got hurt in the compound where Regis lived with her Exxon official father and the rest of her family.

The quality of food is different in the United States as compared to Libya.

"We could get canned foods sometimes," Regis said. "But often they had been in the warehouse a long time and would have swollen tops and be rusty."

Schools are different in Libya, Regis said, and she told about an Arab teacher she had when she was in the fifth or sixth grade.

"He taught in Arabic and every day he would go down the role and say, 'You're ugly, you're pretty, you're ugly, you're pretty,'" Regis said. "It all depended on how he felt about you that day."

"He used to come into the classroom and put his feet up on the desk. He wore sandals and his feet smelled real bad."

"Also, he used to tell us how dumb we were because we were Americans and would say anything to irritate us, but we would just sit there and giggle at him."

"If you had said something nice to him that day, it didn't matter what was on your paper, you would get an A. If you said something he didn't like or got up too many times, then you would get an F."

Social life in Libya was more like people getting together and discussing things, where as in the states people have entertainment by machines, she said.

Retail stores have been Regis' easiest adjustment and she is fascinated with toys and all the things they can do.

Discount card offered

Free discount cards will be issued by June 1.

"Discount cards will be available to all students, staff, faculty, and administration," said Kurt Noell, president of the student government.

"The discount cards will allow a 10 percent discount on merchandise, excluding sale merchandise, with a U.T. Tyler student I.D. and driver's license," Noell said.

The proposed businesses in town giving the University discounts are Red Barn Steak House, Hickory Fare Bar-B-Que, Schlotzsky Sandwich Hut, The Shingle, The Sportster Inc., Murphey the Jeweler, Stereo and Record Center.

The discount cards will be issued at registration and will be available in the Student Association office after registration.

"The card will have the name and address of each merchant offering the discount," Noell said.

Scholarships aid students

Scholarships, aids to help students continue their studies, are offered annually for the most outstanding quality of knowledge and learning shown in special branches of learning.

"The ideal behind the memorial scholarships should provide the recipient a feeling of having been a part of that persons family and meaning behind what these individuals stood for and lived for, regardless of the amount of the award."

It is quite an honor to receive these memorial scholarships," said James Shaw, financial aid director and chairman of the university Scholarship Committee.

Applying for scholarships is as simple as going by and picking up an application form from the Financial Aid office, Shaw said. A number are faculty recommended, however, so no student applications are processed.

Two never awarded are Vaughn Foundation Presidential Scholarship in Nursing and Free Enterprise Scholarship.

One, Texas Roserunners, was awarded for the first time this year.

"Some are easier to get than others. I don't recall more than six or seven applying for one of the five Mike Harvey scholarships in any one year. That's really good odds," said Shaw.

Memorial scholarships students may apply for are Mike Harvey and Phil Stacy Jackson History awards.

Priority deadlines are May 1 for summer sessions, June 1 for fall semesters and November 1 for spring semesters.

Free films are scheduled for the public's enjoyment by the Tyler Film Society, according to Jerry Fitzgerald and Richard Whipple, spokesmen for the Society.

"M" will be shown at the Tyler Public Library, Taylor Auditorium, on May 21 at 6:30 p.m. "M" was produced in 1930 and runs 100 minutes.

"The List of Adrian Messenger," a 1963, 98-minute film, will be shown at Tyler Junior College, Genecov 204, on June 5 at 7:30 p.m.

Cash-find

The money found on campus March 20 that was turned in to the University Police has been returned to the finder.

The cash-find was reported in the April 13 issue of the Patriot, and then held by the University Police for 30 days to enable the lawful owner an opportunity to reclaim the property.

"There were several claims to the money," said University Police Chief Larry Roberts, "but none of the claimants could properly specify the amount found nor the approximate area where the money was located."

All claims to the money are now invalid, and the honesty of the finder has literally paid off.

Dr. James H. Stewart, Jr.

Dr. James H. Stewart, Jr. was formally announced as superintendent of the Masonic Home and School of Texas by Robert L. Dillard, Jr., the governing board president. The appointment will be effective on July 1.

Graduates need to notify office

People working on their master's degrees and who intend to graduate this summer need to notify the Office of Graduate Studies by June 26, said Dr. Patricia A. Gajda, associate vice president for graduate studies and curriculum.

The office will prepare graduates' documents for them to pick up in July.

These students also need to file with the registrar by July 20.

Graduation set May 16

Approximately 325 candidates for degrees will participate in commencement exercises May 16 at 2 p.m. in Harvey Hall. President James H. Stewart Jr. will preside at the ceremonies.

Foundation gift totals $253,000

The U.T. System Board of Regents recently approved a gift of $253,322.80 made up by the U.T. Tyler Educational Foundation, Inc.

The contribution is to be used for both educational and general purposes, including expenditures for student scholarships, as designated by the U.T. Board of Regents through the budgetary process, said President James Stewart Jr.

Student association presents budget

The student association has presented its 1981-82 budget to President Stewart and the budget committee.

"The new budget allows the student association control of approximately 16 percent or $18,950 of the student fees. This is a 14.5 percent increase over the 1980-81 budget," Kurt Noell, president, Student Association, said.

The proposed budget of $18,950 is broken down into four major areas: equipment, travel, activities, and maintenance and operation.

In the area of equipment, $1,600 is allowed for such equipment as weight room and tennis nets.

The student association has been allotted $1,500 for travel expenses. Each of the four schools has a proposed travel expense of $1,000 each plus $3,000 travel and expenses for co-curricular activities for the student services office.

Nature preserve brings beauty to campus

A natural, God-made classroom stands just below the lower dam on the U.T. Tyler campus.

What may look to most of the University community like a wooded area is considerably more to the science department. This 10-acre nature preserve is a giant laboratory.

Few, if any, universities have on-campus preserves with wild-life and vegetation in the backyard.

The idea for the preserve originated about 1973 when the masterplan for the University was developed by the Board of Regents, John Sawyer, vice president for fiscal affairs, said.

Severe terrain features from a gully running through the area lends this area least to further development.

To step into the preserve is to step into timelessness. Outside pressures are forgotten as the quiet begins to slow down the adrenalin. The natural beauty soothes the soul and rest the eyes. Then the full impact of the fresh, woodsy smell is realized and relished.

Although many classes use the preserve, little evidence of human invasion is apparent. Even that is difficult to detect. A keen eye can find an area marked off for certain studies by tags on four corners.

Ornithology, ecology, plant taxonomy, inveterbrate zoology, entomology, mycology and other classes do lab work in the preserve.

The ornithology classes keep records of what is found in the nature preserve.

Some of the work done in the preserve includes taking fungi samples for cultures and collections. Most of the growth and creatures are studied in some way.

Students run transect samples to get an estimate of types of trees and area of ground canopy.

"So much research done by undergraduates at U.T. Tyler is surprising for so small a university," Stephen Rydzak, biology major, said.

He has done research on the seasonal diversity and relative abundance of crab spiders in Smith County for the past two years. He will submit the work for publication in the summer or fall.

The students maintain bird-feeders and houses in the preserve and throughout the campus.

"The two campus lakes are also designated for biology laboratory use," Dr. Lynn Sherrod, dean of sciences and mathematics, said. "The students have surveyed and mapped the lakes."
