Political humorist Mark Russell to speak at lecture series

Joanna Tucker
Patriot Staff Writer

Mark Russell, political humorist and television personality, will finish the 1990-91 UT Tyler Distinguished Lecture Series on Tuesday, April 23.

Russell known for his trademark performances on the piano, will perform in the University Center open area at 8 p.m.

Russell is the third and final speaker of the 1990-91

Distinguished Lecture Series. The first two speakers were Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill and Jane Bryant Quinn.

Russell's mastery of repartee earned him the title of Washington's chief political wisecracker.

His impertinent satire is non-partisan.

Gathered from sources such as the Washington Post, the Wall Street Journal, USA Today and local newspapers, his material reflects the latest legislative and government happenings.

He gleefully roasts Democrats, Republicans, conservatives and liberals alike, nailing them with one-liners he often writes minutes before a performance, taking advantage of breaking news.

Russell's original ambition leaned toward a career as a jazz musician. But now his talent as an accomplished pianist serves to accompany the clever satirical lyrics he sets to music.

Russell's first appearance on the Washington scene began during Eisenhower's final years in office.

But it was the series of live specials broadcast by WNED-TV in Buffalo to a national public television audience, that gained him national recognition.

To date he has completed 14 seasons of programs for the Public Broadcasting System.

Students may pick up a limit of 2 complimentary tickets with a UTT ID card. Faculty and staff may also receive 2 complimentary tickets. Faculty should go to the Alumni Association members may buy discount tickets through the Alumni Office, ADM 333, on a first-come, first-served basis. Only a limited quantity is available.

Requests for additional tickets will be placed on waiting lists at the appropriate distribution center. Should space accommodate, additional tickets may be distributed prior to the lecture.

For information, call the UTT Development Office at (903) 566-7110.

Moliere farce scheduled

By Fay Richardson
Patriot Staff Writer

"The Doctor in Spite of Himself," by Moliere, a short 17th Century French play in three acts, has been adapted and staged into a Texas version of the 325-year old comical farce by the UT Tyler theater department.

Production dates for the play are April 19, 20, 21 and April 26, 27 and 28. Friday and Saturday performances are at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday matinees are at 2 p.m.

The character of Sganarelle, envisioned by Moliere as a woodcutter, becomes a caterer in the UTT production. His bawdy womanizing remains true to the period and the language of Moliere has been preserved in

The play was first performed on August 6, 1666, at the Theatre Palais-Royal in Paris. Moliere's company performed and Moliere acted the role of Sganarelle with his real wife Armande in the role of Sganarelle's wife, Martine.

Sganarelle, played by James E. Johnson, is a wife-beating caterer turned doctor in the production. Sganarelle gets drafted into doctoring even though he knows almost nothing about the medical profession. He quickly discovers that if you wear the right clothing, do a lot of Latin double-talk, and act with authority, people will believe almost anything.

Martine, Sganarelle's wife, will be played by Sherry Smith. Martine is the beaten but unbowed wife this production.

Sganarelle plays the doctor as a character performing a role within the play. The role remains an exceptional performance piece for an inventive actor.

The stage design creates a garden around classical ruins below the main house of Madame Geronte. Incorporating a number of levels and playing spaces, the unit setting raises the floor level from twelve to thirty-six inches above the previous level. The audience sightlines of the stage area have thus been greatly improved.

The cast members themselves form a scenic background to the primary downstage action by holding poses and forming groupings that one would expect at a garden party.

The script has been adapted from a new translation by Albert Bermel of the classic French comedy. This version of the play, structured for actors has not previously been performed in Texas.

The play was cast from open auditions and the eleven member cast conforms to the principles of non-traditional casting (without regard to race and sex as casting constraints).

The performance of this classical work is the first play of this genre to be performed on the UTT campus, presenting a number of challenges for the developing theater program.

Tickets are $2 for students, $3 for adults and $1 for senior citizens.

All UTT students is entitled one complimentary ticket by showing their UTT ID.

The box office opens April 15 and reservations can be made between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday - Friday, by calling (903) 566-7253. Seating is limited, so early reservations are recommended.

In the first UTT production to run for two performance weekends, the acting company will have additional audience contact and enhanced educational acting development, according to Dr. James A. Hatfield, UTT director of theater. The two weekend run should provide everyone in the campus community with a chance to see the production at least once.

who sets out to get even with her husband. She cons the ranch hands into believing the caterer is really a doctor who performs medical miracles.

Madame Geronte, a French West Texas landowner, is played by Gaynor Edwards. Madame Geronte has made plans for her daughter to marry and needs someone to cure the daughter's dumbness so she can say, "I do and I will."

Madame Robert, the mother of Horace in the UTT version, is the hostess for the wedding rehearsal party to be held in Madame Geronte's garden ruins. Madame Robert, played by Glen Dawson has difficulty with Sganarelle and Martine.

Lucas, a very jealous husband of limited means and one of the ranch hands sent to find a doctor, is played by Michael Prewitt. The job of getting Sganarelle to admit he is a doctor falls to Lucas, but then he must attempt to keep Sganarelle away from his wife, Jacqueline.

Jacqueline, the wife of Lucas and Lucinde's former wet-nurse, is played by Lovenia Ford. She has to contend with Sganarelle's advances, cope with a jealous husband, and help with the wedding.

Lucinde, played by Loretta Hamilton, is the stubborn, love-struck, "dumb" daughter of Madame Geronte. She is trying to avoid the marriage to Horace arranged by her mother in order to remain faithful to Leandre.

The "man with the plan" who has the secret to the illness that everyone is trying to cure is Leandre, played by Mike Gorham. With his plan and Sganarelle's help, true love may yet win out.

Valere, played by Dawn Wilson, is the dominant ranch hand and niece of Lucas. She gladly assists in the job of coercing Sganarelle to admit he is a doctor.

The comedy is imperishable. The dialogue is fast-paced, bawdy as that period was, and full of satirical comments on the medical profession.

The stage movement planned by the director brings the performers in close proximity to the audience and the lively, ingenious student acting thoroughly animates the text.

Editor honored

The editor of the (UT Tyler) Patriot was elected vice president of the Texas Intercollegiate Press Association at the Organization's recent convention in Fort Worth.

Michael Prewitt, a journalism senior from Athens, will help run the TIPA business meeting next fall in Houston and will serve on a rules committee that will establish procedures for the organization's journalism contests.

"It's an opportunity to make a lot of contacts in the media across Texas," Prewitt said. "For UTT it's a great opportunity for the school to grow and will help us recruit students. People told me they'd never heard of UT Tyler. They didn't know we exist."

Prewitt, who was a managing editor of The Patriot last semester, is a member of Alpha Chi honor fraternity and of The Student Foundation, a group that serves as student ambassadors for UTT.

A graduate of Trinity Valley Community College, Prewitt served as co-editor, assistant editor, photo editor and sports editor for the TVCC campus paper and received the TVCC President's award given to outstanding graduating students.

At UTT he has also served as circulation manager of The Patriot and as photo editor.

Country needs attitude change

While reading the letter from Natalie (see 'In defense of Deputy Dog' this page), I began pondering several topics I had been planning to write on.

Natalie started me thinking about how much people take advantage of others every day.

People in general will do almost anything to make events occur in such a way that they benefit personally.

Many plans, programs and ideas that were begun with a noble thought, "to help others," have become tools manipulated by the greedy and obnoxious.

How many food stamp recipients have you seen driving expensive cars? Did you know food stamps are sold for cash or drugs in some circles?

For that matter the entire drug trade is based on greed and manipulation. How many drug king pins do you think are dumb enough to take the drugs they push on others? Probably only the ones who are caught. (Not counting those who squeal on others to avoid prosecution).

Affirmative Action and ideals, ie. everyone should be treated equally. But, what do you do about the manipulators and deceivers?

Ignore them? Heck no, they'd rob you blind.

What about the all those people who are still pushing for conscientious objector status in the military?

If they truly have an aversion to combat, why didn't they say so when they signed up? Instead the gulf war brought out droves of students who only wanted assistance with tuition, but didn't feel obligated to defend our country as payment.

The attitude of taking all you can get with the least amount of effort is what is undermining this entire country.

Why do you think the U.S. economy is doing so poorly?

This attitude is not all bad. It's actually helping Japan, Germany, and the European community expand and grow.

Why? Because they're looking out for their countries and not just themselves.

I pray that there are enough decent people still out there with consideration for

Letters

In defense of 'Deputy Dog'

(Editors note: Natalie is a former editor of the UT Tyler Patriot. She wrote this letter in response to the Feb. 26 letter entitled, "Don't trust free help." Natalie is recently married and is living happily in Fort Ord, California.)

My mother always told me, "Never look upon another person and laugh. Never take life and gifts for granted."

Time and time this advice has colored my experiences with a "neighborly" hue...with a sense of love, compassion and appreciation.

Exceptions catch me and throw me for a loop. I believe it's the expectations revolving around "others" which are more "dangerous" as opposed to personal expectations.

When someone or something is there for us without our conscious gift of gratitude, we disparage not only our souls, but our neighbor's actions and intents.

Cliches come to mind:

"Never look a gift horse in the mouth."

"Accidents happen."

Being fair, kind, accepting...it is the magical part of living that makes everything valuable. It becomes precious and holy.

Take care, Deputy dog.

Take care, everyone — of yourselves and others.

Thanks —

Natalie Robison Peacock

Editorial insulting

I am an American, and proud to be one. What shocks me, however, is the attitude taken by many people during and after the Gulf War. The writer of "Desert Storm Doooms Demos" in the last issue of this paper upset me especially.

Calling someone who objects to war "spineless" or lacking "the stomach to tangle with Saddam Hussein" is puerile. The United States and the UN forces did win handily and I am happy the casualties were not high for our forces nor the civilian Iraqi's. A war was probably one of the few ways to rid Saddam of his weaponry and nuclear capabilities as well as push him out of Kuwait. But, please, do not insult people who abhor the thought of killing another human being or believe other means may have worked as well.

I am not old enough to remember World War II, Korea or Vietnam, but I do know that many older friends and relatives — civilian and military — have spoken to me of the horrors of war.

similar programs were begun with a definite purpose, to equalize the treatment of minorities who had been discriminated against. Now some later generations of these first recipients are taking advantage of these situations.

How can someone feel they deserve special treatment because of their race, religion, culture, sex, etc.?

Surely, we would all be better off striving towards the feelings of others. When is the last time you went out of your way to say thank you to someone? Who was the last person you smiled at for absolutely no reason?

Those little things make all the difference in the world to individuals in their daily lives and all the difference in the future of our country.

Think about it.

—Michael Prewitt

"I'm against it. We have too many junior colleges in the area. It would take away from the junior colleges. Its good to take the basics at the junior college level."

Teena Rainwater-Kinabrew

Malakoff

"I think it would be a good idea because that way so many of the students that transfer in would not have to attend two schools at one time."

Kilgore

Films and books back up this view of war.

Apparently the writer saw the extremely antiseptic view of war shown as reality, where the soldier flips a switch and the missiles stream from the mobile launching unit. What was not shown was the instant devastation when they landed.

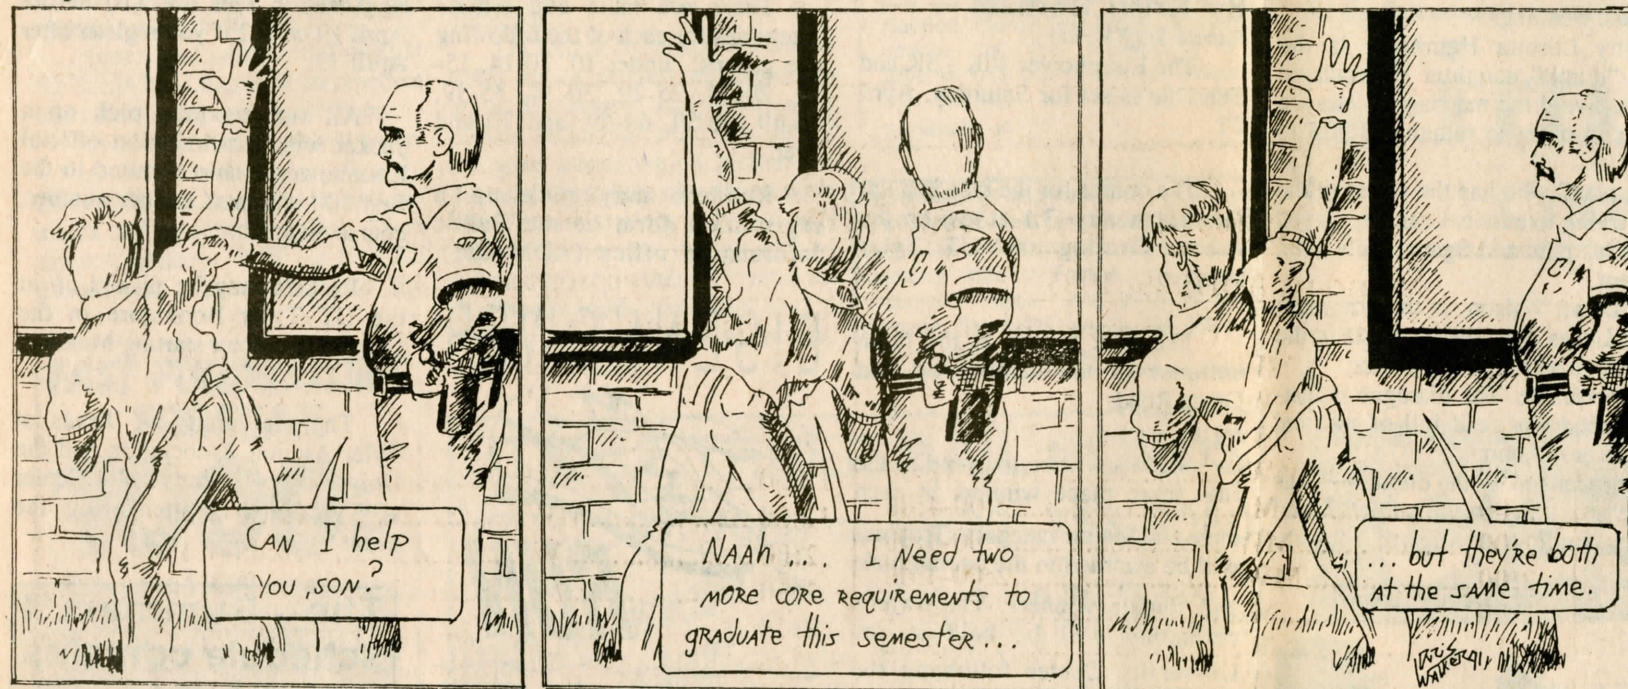

I believe all of us need to see, at least once, the effect of a bouncing-betty land mine, or a room full of soldiers, who happen to be people, after a Tomahawk missile strikes the room they occupy. Maybe a dose of reality would shock us into thinking about the life consequences of war.

One must be sure to the last fiber of their being that more blood must be shed to stop an evil in this world.

Drug use declining?

By Rachel Biscomb

Patriot Copy Editor

Drug use may be declining (according to an article in the March 19 issue of the Patriot) but some drugs are still popular and close to home.

According to the sources interviewed, but wishing to remain anonymous, their drug use began around the ages of 16, 17 and 18.

A 37-year old source said, "Twenty years ago you could walk into someone's house and be offered a joint or a line of coke the way someone offers you a drink today. I don't think it's nearly as widespread. I'm sure it is still going on in some circles, [It's] just not nearly as popular."

According to an 18-year old Tyler Junior College student, marijuana and acid are currently the most popular drugs in Tyler. He said Ecstasy (which was popular a few years ago) is not around much anymore.

A 23-year old student at Austin Community College said what Ecstasy is around is "bunk." "It doesn't have the same effect that it used to, and it's very expensive," she said.

"[In Austin] smoking pot is the norm, it's as normal as drinking," said the source.

According to these sources, the reason acid is so popular is the low cost. In Austin it's $3-4. In Tyler it's $10 a hit.

Of the college students interviewed — two juniors at UT Tyler, a junior at Austin Community College, a junior at UT Arlington, a freshman at TJC and a freshman at Louisiana Tech — all attribute their drug use to recreation and as a method of relaxation.

Only one of the students admitted to getting stoned and attending classes.

Of all the drugs around, marijuana is the most accepted, popular, and controversial. Some arguments for marijuana are the fact that it is natural (a plant) and its recent acceptance as a medical treatment for Glaucoma patients.

All of the aforementioned students said marijuana should be legalized. The reasons they gave dealt with the poor economy and the dangers of alcohol and cigarettes.

Although one of the UTT students commented, "First, people are going to do it one way or another and they end up going to bad places to get it. Second, I don't think anyone has the moral or ethical right to say someone can't do it."

"[Marijuana] should be legal. The health risks are similar to that of alcohol. It deserves a closer look," said the ACC student.

"Alcohol's legal and it's sometimes more dangerous than smoking pot," said the student from LA Tech. "If it were legal, the government's tax on it could solve the national debt."

Another source stated, "The revenue from [legalized marijuana] would solve the large part of the problem with the economy."

As for the effects of drug use, the sources gave somewhat contradictory statements.

One said, "Marijuana and other drugs, like acid, can be educational because they make you look at life from a different perspective. They make you have thoughts you normally wouldn't have."

The student from Austin said, "Any drug can be taken to the extreme. It might be fun for a couple of hours, but it always gives me a bad feeling about myself."

"Being stoned, I couldn't evaluate my own behavior," said a student from UTT. "When you're young, it can definitely make you doubt yourself."

Drugs are a big problem. Or should it be some drugs are a big problem and marijuana is a big issue? However it is stated, it looks like it will be here for a long time.

"It is not physically possible to die from a marijuana overdose. Can we say the same about a marijuana bust?" asked a UTT source.

On March 21, at approximately 4:55, an ex-student attempted to leave the library with three books tucked under his shirt.
