UT Tyler Faculty Encouraged To Seek Research Grants

In the early years of the development of The University of Texas at Tyler, the establishment of sound academic programs and the building of facilities were of immediate concern. Throughout this period, of course, UT Tyler emphasized quality teaching.

Donald W. Whisenhunt, in announcing plans for possible research involvement, said, "Now that the institution has reached a certain level of maturity, it is important that its credibility be enhanced by more research and other scholarly activities.

"By necessity, such scholarship must be achieved in addition to normal workload responsibilities. The administration is interested, however, in facilitating research when possible," the vice president for academic affairs added.

For example, faculty members are encouraged to seek research grants from outside (extramural) sources. Grants could obviously be sought to fund a reduced teaching load for the principal investigator.

All extramural applications must be processed through normal university channels. They must be reviewed for compliance with state law, Board of Regents Rules and Regulations (including indirect costs), and university procedures.

"We must also be certain that they fit the role and scope of The University of Texas at Tyler and that they do not disrupt normal academic activities," Whisenhunt said.

For these reasons, applications must be developed far enough in advance of submission deadlines so that they can be carefully reviewed by both the Office of Academic Affairs and Office of Fiscal Affairs before being submitted to the president for his approval.

If faculty members have questions on this matter, they are encouraged to contact the vice president for academic affairs.

Reorganization Proposal Due For Consideration By Board

The proposed reorganization plan for The University of Texas at Tyler has been submitted for consideration by the board of regents of the UT System at a meeting scheduled April 10-11 in Dallas.

Upon approval by the UT Regents, the plan will then be submitted to the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System for approval before being implemented in September 1980.

Another item submitted for consideration by the board of regents is a recommendation for amendments to the 1979-80 operating budget for UT Tyler.

Class Schedule Alternatives Viewed

Alternatives in the class schedule for the fall semester are being studied at The University of Texas at Tyler. Donald W. Whisenhunt has been requested by the president to work with the deans in developing ideas for scheduling classes which can provide students the opportunity to make less trips to the campus each week.

"We are looking at alternatives which might provide more flexibility for students in scheduling classes with the hope that travel costs for students can be reduced. At the same time, we must keep in mind a basic mission of the university, which is to provide opportunity for quality academic endeavors," James H. Stewart, Jr., said.

Representatives of the student body are being consulted as ideas for the fall are developed.
