Bilingual education faculty appointed

Two professors have been selected for the bilingual education teacher training program at UT Tyler. Dr. Ernest Perez is directing the Title VII Bilingual Education Project and Dr. Delma Banuelos is an assistant professor for the program.

"The purpose of the project is to increase the pool of qualified bilingual educators," Dr. Mac Moseley said.

A $90,347 grant was awarded to the university in December by the U.S. Office of Education for the bilingual training program.

Perez served as state director of the Division of Bilingual Education for the Texas Education Agency for the past six years. His major responsibility was to implement state mandated programs. He earned his Ph.D. and Master of Education degrees from The University of Texas at Austin and a Master of Arts degree from the University of Nebraska.

Banuelos received an Ed.D. degree from Wayne State University in Detroit, Mich. Her Master of Education and Bachelor of Arts degrees are from Texas Woman's University. Before joining the UT Tyler faculty this spring, she was co-director of the Immersion Learning Project at Wayne State University and an associate professor in the Department of Special Education.
