Sesquicentennial Ball caps special week

A Sesquicentennial Ball sponsored by the Student Association will complete UT Tyler's Sesquicentennial Week Festivities Saturday, March 8 at Harvey Hall.

The gala event begins at 8 p.m. and features music from the Big Band era, performed by Dean Bouras and the All That Jazz Band, as well as current rock and Top 40 hits played by a D.J.

"This special evening is the result of months of planning by the Student Life Committee and promises to help make our Sesquicentennial observance both fun and memorable," said Beverly Nuckols, Student Association vice president and Student Life Committee chairman.

Refreshments will be provided and black tie is optional. Admission is open to faculty, staff and students by invitation; complimentary tickets are available in UC 111 and 114.

Artist presented March 11

Artist Bill Komodore of Dallas will talk about his paintings at 2 p.m., Tuesday, March 11 in ADM 127. Third in the Visiting Artist Series sponsored by the Department of Art, Komodore's lecture is open to the public at no charge.

Komodore, whose style has been described as "a kind of fantastic realism," earned a bachelor of arts and a master of fine arts from Tulane University. He has been a guest lecturer at Southern Methodist University. Stephen F. Austin State University and the Dallas Museum of Art.

His paintings are owned by private collectors in Texas as well as museums throughout the country including the Whitney Museum of American Art and the National Gallery of Art. He has had one-man shows in New York, Dallas and his native Greece.

Who's Who ceremony scheduled

A ceremony recognizing the 33 UT Tyler students named to Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities for 1986 is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 19 in UC 134.

Dr. George F. Hamm, UT Tyler president, will present each student a certificate from Who's Who prior to a reception for students, family members and faculty.

Who's Who recipients at UT Tyler were named at the end of the fall semester. Selections are based on academic achievement, leadership and potential for continued success.

Liberal Arts Classical Day events planned March 17

A marionette production of Sophocles' "Antigone" presented by Dr. Peter Arnott, Department of Drama chairman at Tufts University, will highlight the School of Liberal Arts' Classical Day Monday, March 17 on the UT Tyler campus.

More than 140 students of Latin from T.K. Gorman, Robert E. Lee and John Tyler high schools are expected to attend. Scheduled activities include the marionette theater presentation of "Antigone" at 10 a.m. and a lecture, "Production of Ancient Greek Plays," by Arnott at 11:30 a.m., both in ADM 127. Lunch at 12:15 p.m. in UC 134 and a showing of the film "A Funny Thing Happened On the Way to the Forum" at 1 p.m. in ADM 127 are planned for the afternoon.

Arnott teaches theater history at Tufts where he also directs plays at the University Theater. He originated the marionette theater as a medium for serious drama, particularly works from the Greek and Roman repertory, bringing students in contact with a vital theatrical experience.
